GRANTS

Total grants as of end of 2020: Over $1.1 million

Canadian Foundation for Innovation-Leaders Opportunity Fund - “Decision Making Laboratory,” ($232,171) - Principal Investigator, 2020

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “The Untold Story of Consumers’ Everyday Experience and Management of Depletion,” Principal Investigator, 2016-2020, ($161,900)

Sheth Foundation Grant – Conference Co-Chair

“Designing a Career in the Marketing Academy” Conference for Emerging Female Marketing Scholars 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, (total grants $28,000 to date)

Association for Consumer Research Grant – Conference Co-Chair

“Designing a Career in the Marketing Academy” Conference, New York City, 2015 ($2500)

Both the ACR and the Sheth Foundation Grants allowed myself and my co-chair (Joan Ball) to run a successful, annual, invitation-only three-day event. We gather together a small group (typically 22) of senior female marketing doctoral students and pre-tenure faculty for a design-thinking inspired workshop about a career in the marketing academy. We focus on the research, teaching, and service components of the career during the workshop, and maintain an active online alumni group afterward. As word of mouth has spread, we have an extensive waiting list, and we are currently training other senior female faculty to run similar events in other parts of North America. I firmly believe in the phrase “diversity in the classroom begins at the front,” and we have sought participants from communities of color, and from smaller institutions that may not offer senior faculty mentors, as well as female academics from larger established programs.

Canadian Foundation for Innovation-Leaders Opportunity Fund

“Behavioral Laboratory for the Study of Consumer Welfare,” ($275,000) - Principal Investigator

This grant was the final part of a multi-year project to set up a behavioral laboratory and subject pool. I created this as a shared resource, and the lab is now used by behavioral researchers in marketing, organizational behavior, leadership, entrepreneurship, finance, and accounting. The project included presentations to university level committees, as well as working with Western University’s building, architecture, and engineering groups. I worked extensively with procurement processes for the construction, as well as for the advanced equipment (eye-tracking and other physiological measurement equipment, extensive computers and networking, and camera/recording equipment). Working with corporate donors, my colleague Miranda Goode and I have now set up a facility that conducts studies for Ivey researchers both in the lab itself and online, with students subjects as well as the general public and/or business practitioners.

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “Processing Form and Function in Advertising Contexts,” Principal Investigator, 2011-2014, ($70,462)

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “Academic Consumer Research Interest Network,” Collaborator, 2012, ($37,681)

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “The Paradox of Ethical Consumption: How Consumerism Reduces Pro-Social Behavior Both Within and Beyond Consumer Contexts,” Co-Investigator, 2011-2014, ($69,735)

Research Network for Business Sustainability – “Socially Conscious Consumers,” Principal Investigator, 2008-2009, ($25,000)

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “Self-Regulation in Consumer Goals, Motives, and Decisions,” Principal Investigator, 2007-2010, ($66,000)

Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council - “Similarity, Predictive Accuracy, and Assumed Similarity: Analyzing Dyads in Marketing and Consumer Research,” Principal Investigator, 2004-2007, ($76,800), Proposal ranked 10th of 137 submitted.

Academic Development Fund, University of Western Ontario – Behavioral Lab Development (with Kyle Murray), 2007 ($60,200)

University of Western Ontario – SSHRC Reapplication Grant, 2003

University of South Carolina Sponsored Programs and Research Grant: 1998-1999

Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) Grant: 1999-2000

SERVICE TO THE PROFESSION

President-Elect, Association for Consumer Research

This organization is the leading consumer research association in the field, and is very highly respected among the academic community. ACR advances consumer research by bringing together academia, industry, and government worldwide. The Association organizes and supports conferences to grow the field of consumer research, and also publishes scholarly research through proceedings and the ACR journal, Journal of the Association for Consumer Research.

Co-Editor:

Journal of Consumer Research, 2021-2023 (special initiative: Diversity, Equity, Inclusion)

President – DCMA – “Designing a Career in the Marketing Academy”

I have created a leadership team for an initiative that Joan Ball and I created in 2015. We are currently registering a non-profit organization, and creating by-laws and a formal leadership structure. This event assists young female marketing scholars build their skills and their networks in the academic field, and is designed to address the “leaky pipeline” issue of female academics leaving the academy. I firmly believe in the phrase “diversity in the classroom begins at the front,” and we have sought participants from communities of color, and from smaller institutions that may not offer senior faculty mentors, as well as female academics from larger established programs.

SERVICE TO IVEY BUSINESS SCHOOL and WESTERN UNIVERSITY

Faculty Director, Research, Ivey Business School, 2015-2019

In this role I oversaw the research function of the school, and I was charged with both strategic initiatives to increase knowledge creation and dissemination of faculty research, as well as implementation of improvements in funding, tracking, and dissemination of knowledge. These initiatives included the creation of a more comprehensive “research dashboard” that recognizes various forms of contribution to knowledge development and dissemination, as well as a social media presence for Ivey research. The role also included membership on the school’s four person Executive Committee, creation and management of an annual budget for the research side of the school’s mandate, and meeting regularly with the staff side of the business (marketing, communications, media). The role also includes management of the research staff, including two Research Officers, the Behavioral Lab Manager, and one Coordinator of Research and PhD Admissions.

Director, Startech.com Marketing Executive Roundtable, 2015-present

I created and manage a marketing executive roundtable at Ivey, with/for local businesses. A Startech.com donation is intended to increase local business marketing skills and experience, and funds a twice yearly meeting whereby an academic marketing expert facilitates a discussion of current research advances in marketing that have practical implications for marketing practice. Visiting speakers I have hosted so far include Kent Grayson (Kellogg), John Deighton (Harvard), Susan Fournier (Boston University), and Mark Houston (Texas A&M), Jeff Inman (Pittsburgh), Ann McGill (Chicago), Darren Dahl (UBC), and Bernd Schmitt (Columbia).

Marketing Area Group Coordinator, 2013 - present

Ivey does not have departments, but this role is akin to the Department Head role. Generally, I organize recruitment, on-boarding, and mentoring of junior faculty (I have hired more than 12 new faculty members at Ivey). I have organized the group’s faculty in various roles (brown-bag coordinator, PhD coordinator, etc.) In various years I have planned teaching assignments for faculty, or delegated this role, and made scheduling and program decisions.

Director, PhD Program, Ivey Business School, 2011-2014

In this role, I oversaw Ivey’s PhD program, from admissions to graduation. The program size ranges from approximately 60 – 80 doctoral students. During my tenure in that role, as an advocate for the students, I increased the overall funding available to students, increased merit-based additional funding, and created more flexibility concerning conference and travel funding. At the same time, as an advocate of quality, I made our admissions procedure more professional by adding personal interviews of recommended candidates, and increasing the quality requirements (grades, test scores, etc.) for prospective graduates. The results of these changes have been positive. We now have a slightly smaller, but higher quality, group of PhD students with more resources at their disposal to conduct and present their research.
