My research investigates how fashioning new devices and collective actions can help transform markets toward sustainability. I aim to push the boundaries of knowledge and practice by analyzing the latest social and environmental innovations in finance and accounting. As an ethnographer, I favour interviews and observation as primary data collection methods.

The Honourable Steven Guilbeault, Minister of Environment and Climate Change said:

“The twin crises of climate change and biodiversity loss are two sides of the same coin, and we must tackle both crises together. That’s why the Government of Canada is funding projects like the Deshkan Ziibi Conservation Impact Bond Initiative. By supporting conservation, green innovation, green jobs, and reconciliation, this initiative represents the kind of innovative thinking we need to meet Canada’s conservation goals and address the climate crisis.”
